

REWRITING THE STORY

All mothers dream of seeing their children grow up healthy. But in South Sudan, a woman is 135 times more likely than in the U.S. to die during pregnancy and childbirth.

In response to this tragic reality, your compassionate generosity is helping to rewrite the story of motherhood in South Sudan—and around the world.

In South Sudan, CMMB-supported community health workers are a lifeline. This is especially true for pregnant women and newborns, whose very lives depend on access to quality healthcare.

Thanks to supporters like you, over 4,000 mothers were able to deliver their babies at a CMMB-supported health facility in South Sudan, staffed by trained health workers, in just the last six months. New mom Nancy is one of them.

“Before going to the hospital, I was feeling dizzy, had a headache, and my heart was beating very fast,” said Nancy.

Learning that her baby’s healthy start depended on the care of trusted health workers, Nancy didn’t miss a single prenatal care visit. Then, when she started experiencing life-threatening complications, she accepted her referral to the hospital, trusting that it was the safest solution. The decision was lifesaving.

By emergency C-section, Nancy soon safely gave birth to a healthy bundle of joy!

“I am so happy,” said Nancy. “I am now okay, and my baby is alive.”

In South Sudan and around the world, precious lives depend on supporters like you.

Thanks to you, mothers and babies are alive and thriving today. South Sudan.
